Dickens on Wine Countries.

The following from Dickens is to the point, and he has a good opportunity of knowing whereof he speaks: "The wine shops are the colleges and chapels of the poor in France. History, morals, politics, jurisprudence and literature, in various forms are all taught in these colleges and chapels, where professors of will continually deliver these lessons, and where hymns are sung nightly to the morality of property and the justice of the law. It is in the wine shop the workman is taught to think it her lot to shoot the middle class man who disputes his fare. It is in the wine shop the workman is taught to admire the man who makes his faithful mistress. It is in the wine shop the doom is pronounced of the employer who lowers the pay of the employed. The wine shop breeds in the mind of the poor a sense of the physical atmosphere of envy and vengeance, the most of crime and revolution. Hence it is proverbially a bad counselor, but drink is worse."

Removing the Capital.

Horse Greely says: "If the American people, for reasons satisfactory to themselves, prefer a different location for the capital, and it is high time to face the question. It has been raised and ought to be fully considered and decided upon. It is a question of national importance, and it is one which should be decided upon by the people."
